Adbry™ Available at AllianceRx Walgreens Prime

Atopic dermatitis medication among several limited distribution drugs now available through the specialty pharmacy.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 15, 2022 – AllianceRx Walgreens Prime is proud to announce the addition of Adbry™ (tralokinumab-ldrm) to its specialty pharmacy for patients with atopic dermatitis (AD).

AD is the most common form of eczema, an inflammatory skin condition that causes skin to be dry and itchy, resulting in scaly patches, rashes, blisters and skin infections.¹ One in 10 Americans is impacted by AD. While it typically develops by 5 years of age, it can start as early as birth and continue through life.² AD symptoms can come and go. In some children, symptoms may taper off as they grow up while other children will have disease flares into adulthood.³

Marketed by LEO Pharma Inc., Adbry is approved for the treatment of moderate-to-severe AD in adult patients whose disease is not adequately controlled with topical prescription therapies or when those therapies are not advisable.

AllianceRx Walgreens Prime is proud to partner with Leo Pharma Inc. in serving patients with AD, says Tracey James, RPh, senior vice president, pharmacy services at AllianceRx Walgreens Prime. “Having access to Adbry allows us to provide patients the support they deserve in managing their moderate-to-severe AD,” James says. “Our companies are aligned in a mutual desire to support patients throughout their treatment journey and provide the best possible outcomes to improve their quality of life.”
